

Building a Client Kit

Prescribing for a real person — across skin type, occasion, climate, and budget

Learning Objectives

- Build a minimal, everyday makeup kit appropriate to a client's skin type and lifestyle
- Adjust product recommendations for India's humidity and monsoon conditions
- Prescribe within a client's stated budget without compromising the essentials
- Distinguish an everyday kit from a special-occasion kit, and explain what changes between them

A kit is a prescription, matched to a life

The question a client actually needs answered is rarely "what's trending?" It is "what should I actually own, and use, given my skin, my mornings, and my budget?" Answering it well is this module's entire purpose.

The seven-piece everyday foundation

1. SPF-forward moisturiser or primer — the true sun protection layer, per Course I, applied before any colour product.
2. A lightweight, correctly shade-matched base — tinted moisturiser, skin tint, or light foundation, matched per Module Two.
3. Concealer — for targeted coverage only, not full-face use.
4. Cream or powder blush — the single fastest way to look rested.
5. Brow product — a pencil or gel matched to natural brow colour.
6. Mascara — opens the eyes more than almost any other single product.

7. A tinted lip balm or your everyday lip colour — finishing the look without requiring a full routine.

A genuinely complete everyday face can be built from these seven items. Everything beyond this list is a special-occasion or personal-preference addition, not a baseline requirement.

India's climate: what changes and why

- Humid and monsoon conditions. Favour water-resistant or waterproof formulas for mascara and brow product specifically, lighter-weight, oil-controlling base formulas, and setting spray over heavy setting powder, which can look cakey as humidity increases oil production through the day.
- Dry winter climates. Cream and liquid formulas generally outperform powder, which can look patchy on drier skin; a hydrating primer becomes essential rather than optional.
- High-heat outdoor events. Prioritise long-wear, transfer-resistant formulas (Module Four) and confirm the client is layering genuine SPF underneath, not relying on a tinted base alone.

Prescribing within a budget

If a client's budget is limited, prioritise spend in this order: correctly shade-matched base first (used daily, and the item most damaging to get wrong), a good concealer second, and mascara third — these three items do the most visible, daily work. Colour products like eyeshadow palettes are the most postponable category, and a single well-chosen multi-use cream stick (cheeks and lips both) can often substitute for two separate purchases.

Everyday kit versus special-occasion kit

An everyday kit favours the light-handed, skin-first application from Module Six. A special-occasion kit adds long-wear formulas suited to extended duration, a more saturated colour palette suited to photography and evening light (Module Seven), and any global technique elements (Module Twelve) the occasion calls for. The two kits share a base; the occasion kit simply layers additional intention on top of it.

Practical Activity · The Full Prescription

Using the undertone record from Module Two and the assessment card from Module Three, build a complete seven-piece everyday kit recommendation for that same client or model, including one seasonal adjustment and one budget-conscious substitution.

File this alongside your earlier records for the capstone.
