

The Practitioner's Financial Kit

Bookkeeping, tax basics, emergency funds, and the insurance that protects everything else you've built

Learning Objectives

- Set up basic bookkeeping and invoicing systems for a beauty practice
- Explain foundational tax obligations relevant to a small beauty business in India
- Build an appropriate emergency fund for a practice with variable income
- Explain why liability insurance matters even for a meticulous, safety-focused practitioner

The kit that protects everything the other fourteen modules build

A beautifully run practice with no financial records is one uncomfortable tax season or one insurance claim away from serious trouble. This module assembles the financial infrastructure every other skill in this course depends on.

- Bookkeeping and invoicing. A simple, consistent system — spreadsheet or dedicated software — tracking every service, product cost, and payment, updated regularly rather than reconstructed from memory at year end.
- Tax basics. In India, a service business crossing the GST (Goods and Services Tax) registration threshold must register and file accordingly; consult a qualified accountant to confirm your specific obligations rather than relying on informal advice, and keep organised records year-round to make filing straightforward rather than a crisis.
- Emergency fund. Given the income variability inherent to service-based, appointment-driven work, aim to build a reserve covering several months of essential personal and business expenses, protecting against a slow season or an unexpected leave from Module Eight.

- Liability insurance. Covers the rare but real possibility of a client injury or property damage claim, regardless of how carefully every safety standard in this curriculum has been followed — protection against genuine bad luck, not a signal of poor practice.
