

The Ritual, Step by Step

The full ubtan ceremony protocol and the fragrance-and-adornment finishing sequence

Learning Objectives

- Perform a complete ubtan ceremony application protocol from start to finish
- Execute the fragrance and adornment finishing sequence in correct order
- Coordinate an ubtan ceremony's timing within a broader multi-day wedding schedule
- Explain why the ubtan ceremony and the wedding-day finishing sequence are taught as two distinct protocols

Two rituals, two different days, two different protocols

The ubtan or haldi ceremony traditionally takes place before the wedding day itself, often as its own celebrated event, while fragrance and final adornment happen in the last minutes before the ceremony begins. This module teaches both sequences distinctly, because conflating them risks rushing a ritual that deserves its own unhurried time.

The ubtan ceremony protocol

1. Prepare the paste fresh, matched to the client's skin needs from Modules Two and Four
2. Seat the client comfortably, protecting clothing with appropriate draping
3. Apply in gentle, upward strokes, inviting family participation as is traditional
4. Allow the paste to sit and partially dry, typically fifteen to twenty minutes
5. Rinse gently with lukewarm water, never hot, to avoid stripping the skin
6. Follow with a light, fragrance-free moisturiser, saving fragrance application for the wedding day itself

The wedding-day finishing sequence

1. Complete hair, face, and drape per Course VI's full sequence
2. Apply bindi last among facial elements, once base makeup is fully set
3. Place jewelry per the tradition being followed, per Course VI's Module Twelve
4. Apply fragrance last of all, to covered pulse points per Module Seven's safety guidance
5. Perform a final full-look check under real event lighting before the client leaves the chair

Practical Activity · Perform Both Sequences

Perform the full ubtan ceremony protocol on a partner or model, then, on a separate occasion, perform the wedding-day finishing sequence. Time each and note where your actual practice diverged from the written protocol.
